

Kevin Rudd's body language

/// He needs to omit the smirk and wobble of the head he does when asked a question and he should look at Tony Abbott when he's speaking

/// The average person who doesn't understand the issues might be thinking 'Rudd sounds and looks so certain I'm starting to believe him'

/// He has lessened the number of hand gestures. He definitely appeared more leader-like

Tony Abbott's body language

/// He had to refer to his notes often, which gives the perception that he wasn't across the material

/// The worst moment was interrupting Kevin Rudd and also interrupting the questions. ... something George W. Bush used to do

/// Debates are about projecting the personality of a national leader, a higher view - not about point scoring, jokes and asides
